INTRODUCTION

The World Health Organisation defines Pharmacovigilance (PV) as "the science and activities relating to the detection, assessment, understanding and prevention of adverse effects or any other drug-related problem."

The goals of PV are to bolster patient safety concerning medicine use by providing a system to collect, assess, and distribute drug safety data. PV activities involve monitoring approved drugs and investigational medicinal products (IMPs) to:

- *Identify previously unknown adverse effects
- *Recognize changes in the frequency or severity of known adverse effects
- *Assess a drugs risk/benefit to determine if action is required to improve safety
- *Ensure the accuracy of information communicated to healthcare professionals and patients, and to ensure information contained in patient information leaflets (PILs) is up to date

NEED OF PHARMACOVIGILANCE

- Thalidomide Tragedy: Thalidomide was a widely used drug in the late 1950s and early 1960s for the treatment of nausea in pregnant women. It became apparent in the 1960s that thalidomide treatment resulted in severe birth defects in thousands of children.
- There are more than 2,216,000 serious ADRs in hospitalized patients, causing over 106,000 deaths annually. If true, then ADRs are the 4th leading cause of death—ahead of pulmonary disease, diabetes, AIDS, pneumonia, accidents, and automobile deaths.
- Insufficient Evidences: Evidence of safety from clinical trials is insufficient due to some limitations ([phase 1-3]: limited size, narrow population [age & sex specific], narrow indications [only specific disease], short duration.
